ESSENCE Processing Delays

October 25, 2017

ESSENCE Processing Delay Resolved

The ESSENCE processing delay reported earlier this week has been resolved. The ESSENCE application has now caught up on the processing backlog and users should see their data in the ESSENCE application within a more normal time frame. The NSSP team will stay engaged with Johns Hopkins and continue to monitor the system and provide updates to the community.

Effect on Services:

- None: Processing delay has been resolved.

User-Required Actions:

- None at this time

Please contact the syndromicsurveillance@azdhs.gov for any questions about your ESSENCE data.

On August 25, 2017, Hurricane Harvey hit the gulf coast as a Category 4 storm and then dumped more than a foot of rain on Houston. Roughly two weeks later on Sunday, September 10, 2017, Hurricane Irma ripped through the US Virgin Islands and the Keys before making landfall at Marco Island, then barreling up Florida's west coast and affecting much of the state. Shortly thereafter on September 20, 2017, Hurricane Maria hit Puerto Rico.
